LIVE EVERGREENS For Window Boxes

The Live Evergreen Window Box completes the home picture in winter as flowers and shrubs do in summer. The vivid, varied greens of the growing plants write warmth and welcome into the first impression of the house. They make the plainest front inviting, and the charming house more charming.

The plants illustrated come packed in a neat wooden box, three feet long, seven inches wide and six inches deep, painted dark green. The reasonable prices here quoted include careful packing and delivery to the express office in Framingham, Mass., or to the parcel post if preferred. Express or parcel-post charges collected on delivery. The average shipping weight of the boxes is twenty-five pounds.

All special orders as advertised in this booklet should be accompanied with remittance ful roots give

all conditions

Planting and Care. Fill your box or pot with rich earth. Spread out the roots carefully and plant deep enough to cover the earth-ring on the stem. Water well, and repeat as often
as needed; freezing
will not hurt the roots but drying
will.

Our Live Evergreens are hardy in and out of doors.
Practically no care is needed except watering. They are the most suitable,
most practicable,
most economical
winter decoration.

7 Arborvitae and Box for $5.00
Plants about 1 foot high

Arborvitae, much used on cement, stucco, and stone fronts, gives mass without formal lines. Winter coloring, bronzed or purplish green.

17 Blended Evergreens and Box for $10.00
Plants about 1 foot high

This rich blending of color and texture supplied by Arborvitae, White Spruce, Douglas Fir and two forms of Juniper, enlivens a monotonous facade.

Ground Junipers and Dwarf Mountain Pine and Box for $10.00

These two superb Junipers, each of 2-foot spread, combine with the fine 18-inch prostrate Pine to make the most delicate and definite of decorative schemes against a clear background.

8 White Spruce, with 6 Ground Juniper and Box for $11.00
Spruce about 1 foot high

For height and formal line White Spruce is most decorative in its symmetry and vivid silvery-green color. The Ground Juniper makes a soft filling at the base of the trees.

6 Ground Junipers and Box for $10.00
Plants of good spread about 1 foot high

Ground Juniper is much used where low horizontal effects are desired, as on houses of Colonial type. Color, a frosty blue haze on clear green. Soft, lacy effect.

As a centerpiece on the dining table a perky little Spruce or Fir is a most interesting substitute for flowers. When the last gorgeous Dahlia is black with frost and even the Chrysanthemums are gone in the garden, growing Evergreens in pots solve the house-plant problem.

Fifty small Blue Spruces went recently to one of our customers to be used for place-decorations at a dinner. The suggestion is timely for Christmas and New Year feasts. Plants ordered now will be shipped when desired.

These beautifully grown little evergreens, the dense Arborvitae, the delicate Juniper, the shapely Spruces and Firs, are most charming on broad window-sills and low stands. We sell them in all suitable sizes. They are readily planted in any flower pot or other attractive container. They combine well with flowers and are also attractive alone, each species having its own variant of green and its individual form and fragrance. After a few weeks of the indoor warmth they put out delicate light green tips as exquisite as flower buds.

Last Christmas Eve I drove past a house whose casement windows twinkled with dozens of candles above window-boxes of pointed spruces. Between the parted curtains stood the dearest and tiniest of Christmas trees, a Spruce not more than three feet tall, covered with bright trimmings and with electric bulbs gleaming on its dainty branches. Snow piled high, and ice tips shining on the gay small evergreens of the window-boxes, gave exquisite greeting to the sweetest night of the year.

It might have been arranged for a stage picture, but it was not. It was just a happy home in holiday dress. Shall we send you the material to dress yours as quaintly this year?

Our Special Little Live Christmas Tree makes it easy. See back cover.

We do not sell Pots, Urns or Decorated Window Boxes.
